Provincetown.

Last year the stock of sch. Annie Perry was $30,757. This year that craft stocked $30,689.79, but the season's work of the present year was shorter than that of last season, the Perry's crew leaving her some weeks ago to join the new sch. Rose Dorothea. When the crew transfer was made and the Perry went into winter quarters, the Perry fishermen had earned for the season, $787.25. Since joining sch. Rose Dorothea this crew has been fortunate. This craft is now out on its last trip for the year, and it is believed that the share of the crew of the Perry—Dorothea for the present year will be nearly $900 per man, an amount that easily makes the crew the high-liner crew, but one, from Provincetown.

Thick Haze Accounts for Loss of Sch. Maud M. Story.

Crew Were All Night in Dories Before Landing.

Capt. Colin Nickerson, Seth Nickerson and Abraham Nickerson of the wrecked sch. Maud M. Story arrived home last night, coming to Boston from Yarmouth on the steamer Boston. Two of the crew, James Nickerson and B. Jeron, missed the boat and had to wait over in Yarmouth.

Capt. Nickerson, in speaking of the loss of the vessel, said:

"On Thursday we were off of Sambro, though how far off we did not know, as there was vapor on the water. The mate whose watch it was, saw the light shining dimly, and calculated it to be some miles away, but in reality it was close by. With a sudden shock we struck on Southwest Breaker, about two miles from Sambro. It was a glancing blow, and the schooner immediately slid off into deep water. But the blow had been sufficient to stove in her side, and the water poured in in great streams.

Immediately all hands leaped to the pumps, and worked with a will, but the pumps seemed to make no impression on the water in the well. The water was over the lockers, and she was listed heavily to port when we pushed off in two dories, and a few minutes later she disappeared under the water.

"It was then 10 o'clock at night. The sea was rough, and there was a heavy sea running, so that we did not attempt to land. We rowed about all night and when morning broke we were nearly exhausted, but able to get ashore. The villagers treated us well, and when we had recovered, drove us over to Halifax, where the American consul gave us transportation back to Boston. We had been able to save but little, so quickly did the vessel go down."

Halibut Packers on West Coast.

It is learned that the government has the knowledge that there is a great deal of poaching going on on the west coast by Yankee halibut schooners says the Ottawa, Can., Press. The poachers, however, know the exact whereabouts of the Kestrel of the preventive service as well as the men on board her, and the water is free from pirates whenever the ship arrives on the scene. It is believed when a second boat is put in service that plans can be arranged to overcome this difficulty and thus rid the waters of British Columbia of halibut poachers.—New York Fishing Gazette.

Swift & Co. and the Fish Business.

The editor visited Gloucester during the week to investigate the rumors that Swift & Co. (the meat packers of Chicago) would establish a salt fish business in that city. While nothing positive was learned, enough information was gathered to warrant us in stating that it is only a question of time when Swift & Co. will have a plant on a large scale. At present, they are handling fish through a well-known firm, until such time as they are ready to perfect their contemplated plans, which will probably be some time during the winter.—New York Fishing Gazette.

HEAVY GALE.

Swept Newfoundland Coast Sunday Night.

A despatch from St. John's, N. F., says that a fierce gale swept the coast Sunday night compelling all shipping to remain in harbor during the day. Three disasters are reported and a number of American herring vessels were forced to shelter in harbors at Bay of Islands.

They Are Easy.

It is easy to cure chapped hands if you will use Barker's Snow Flake Cream. Most people in Gloucester know this. The cream gives the skin a velvet-like softness.

Monster Herring Cargo.

The Talbot, owned by the American Fish Company, arrived at Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 20, from Pleasant Bay, Alaska, with 6000 barrels of herring. The Talbot will not make another trip until spring, and will winter at Tacoma, where the American Fish Company have their offices.

Purse Seine for Herring Fishing.

There is some talk of using the American purse seine in the herring fishing of Great Britain. It was introduced from this country to Sweden about 1880 by fishermen, and is now used in that country and Norway for catching herring sprats.

Good Codfishing at Bay of Islands.

Splendid catches of codfish are daily made at the arms of Bay of Islands, and fishermen are within call of their own homes, yet secure from one to one and a half quintals of prime cod daily. This is at no risk for no matter how stormy the weather outside may be, the water is generally smooth in the Arms. This fall excellent work has been done, and several men have big catches ashore.—St. John's, N. F., Herald.

FOUND HERRING SCARCE.

Bay of Island People Not Looking for Big Run.

Capt. Jerome McDonald Talked with the Old Exp. rts.

Capt. Jerome McDonald, who has been at Bay of Islands, N. F., studying the situation there, and who left there a week ago today, is not very strongly impressed with the prospect of securing a cargo of herring, and has decided not to send a vessel there for a frozen cargo.

Capt. McDonald says there would be no trouble in securing a cargo if the herring were there, for the American vessels, while he was there, did as well catching their own fish as did the Nova Scotia vessels which were buying them, and showed that when it came to herring fishing the American dories were "in it" with the native boats.

He talked with many of the natives, the older men, who watch the signs from year to year and know the ways of herring as they know the road to their own houses, and all agreed that the outlook was poor for a good run of herring. He talked with the old custom house officer, a man of 50 years of experience, who said that from the action of the herring when they struck the coast farther up, he did not look for a big strike in Bay of Islands.

Capt. McDonald also had a talk with most of the American captains there, and while they were all hustling to get loads, they were fearful that the expected run might not come. Still, as they all said, a day might change the looks of things, for when the herring came, they came with a rush. They had found no trouble in fishing and despite the scarcity, had done as well catching their herring as had the Nova Scotia vessels which were buying from the native boats.

Mackerel Note.

The fall mackerel fishery on that section of the coast from Aspy Bay to Fouchie was almost a failure. Mackerel from the North Bay and Magdalen Islands appear to have passed along the Inverness coast through the Strait of Canso and South along the Guysboro shore.
